

More teenagers die due to motor vehicle accidents than any other single cause.

Nothing else is even close.

If you are a parent, and if you are to suffer that greatest of family tragedies--the death of your child--the most likely cause will be a motor vehicle accident.

Your teen driver is also at greater risk to be badly injured and to be responsible for an accident in which others are killed or badly injured.

What are you going to do about it?

Whether your teen is riding with friends or driving themselves:

- First, get informed by reading the linked contracts for riding and driving. Revise if needed, then print the contracts.
- Second, have your teen(s) read, sign, and most importantly, comply with the contract.
- Last, periodically review and/or revise the contract.
